

Learning how to do research

8 week FREE training course for people with a learning disability

What will you learn on this course?

- What research is
- Why people do research
- How people do research
- How you can help with research

You will get a chance to practice doing research.

For example:

- Doing interviews
- Making a questionnaire
- Work out what the answers mean

Who is the course for?

People with a learning disability.

They should be interested in:

- finding out answers to questions
- what other people think and do

It is OK to bring a supporter with you.

The course will help you decide if you would like to be a researcher.

You get a certificate when you finish the course.

This could help you find a job as a researcher.

When? 8 Tuesday afternoons (2.00-4.00pm)

First lesson: 30 April 2019

Last lesson: 18 June 2019

It is important that you come to all the lessons.

Where? St George's University in Tooting, London.

Who are the teachers?

We have lots of experience of doing research together with people with a learning disability.

- Claire Lam will lead the lessons.
- Professor Irene Tuffrey-Wijne will make sure everything goes well.
She will also teach on some afternoons.
- Other people will help with the teaching, including people with a learning disability.

We have 10 free places available.

The course is paid for by the National Institute for Health Research (part of the NHS), because they want more people with learning disabilities to be involved in research.

How do I apply?

The course leaders will decide who gets a place. To help us decide:

- Tell us why you want to do the course.
- Tell us anything else about your life that you think we'd be interested in.
- You can do this in a letter, email, video, in person, or in whatever way you find easiest.
- You can ask someone to help you.

We want to tell you more about the course. Get in touch and ask us!
